BAY DISASTER RECALLED

Loss of Steamer Express in the Chesapeake October 22, 1878.

The rainy and occasionally windy weather of the past few days brings to mind a terrible storm in Chesapeake Bay on the night of October 22, 1878, 34 years ago last Tuesday night, when the steamer express, Captain James Barker, foundered off Point Lookout and carried down with her several of the crew and passengers who perished.

The express left Baltimore for Alexandria at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and was nearing Point Lookout at midnight. The wind had been coming in heavy flaws and later it set in with tornado force, lashing the bay into a foam. A heavy flaw struck the ill-fated steamer and carried away part of her upper works, disabling the machinery and rendering her helpless. She floundered about in the trough of heavy seas and finally settled to the bottom.

The express had been running on the Baltimore route since the close of the civil war. She had originally been built as a towboat, and had operated at Norfolk and on Chesapeake Bay. She was subsequently lengthened and fitted up as a passenger and freight steamer. The steamer was of the old time sliding beam class.

On the night the express was lost all steamers caught out on the bay had thrilling experiences. The steamer Sue, from this port for Baltimore, had reached the mouth of the Patapo-co river, but the wind was so fierce that she was unable to enter the river, and was kept tossing in the bay until the wind diminished in force.

Driver Resigns.

At the meeting Wednesday night of the Reliance Steam Fire Engine Company, Edward Farnhill, driver of the hose wagon, tendered his resignation, he having accepted a position in Washington. The company recommended Harry Lunsford as his successor, and at a meeting of the fire committee of the City Council held last night Lunsford was elected to succeed Farnhill.

Justice Caton Sustained.

It was erroneously stated yesterday that the Corporation Court had remitted the fine of $10 imposed upon Joseph Heyman for exceeding the speed limit in an automobile, but had sustained action of Justice Caton in fining him $5 for contempt. Heyman had appealed from the judgment of the Police Court. Robinson Menure, counsel for Heyman, withdrew the appeal and the fine for exceeding the speed limit was paid. The Court sustained Justice Caton in fining Heyman for contempt, and the defendant announced his purpose of taking an appeal to the Supreme Court of Appeals in that case.

DIED—Suddenly, on October 23d at served.

The officers and members of Andrew Jackson Lodge return the courtesies on November 7th, when they have invited the officers of Alexandria-Washington Lodge to confer the degrees.

POLICE COURT NOTES.

There were but few cases on the docket of the Police Court this morning.

M. A. Costello was charged with keeping a vicious dog. The Accused was in the police court several weeks ago, having been summoned to answer a similar charge. Several residents of South Washington street were in the court this morning having been summoned as witnesses. Most of them were ready to testify that Costello's dog, which his of the bulldog species, attacks other dogs and tears them unmercifully. The animal is supposed to be kept upon the premises of its owner, but it occasionally gets into the street when it is alleged, attacks every dog that lucklessly falls into its way. The police were unable to locate Costello, and the case was continued until Monday evening at 7 o'clock.

Joseph Dudley, colored had been arrested on a charge of assault preferred by Virgie Richardson, colored. He was dismissed.
